CHOUDHURY IS PREPARING SoundExchange's case on behalf of recording artists and labels for the Copyright Royalty Board proceeding to decide royalty rates that webcasting services such as Pandora and iHeartRadio will pay from 2016 through 2020. He has also represented and advised TV studios in disputes over profit participation, licensing of digital rights on existing and emerging platforms, exclusivity provisions in talent contracts, and applications of California's seven-year rule. "Litigating content issues today is as much about understanding evolving digital access models as it is about the established law," he says.
